Public Access to Environmental Information Policy

The Department of Primary Industries (DPI) is committed to promoting transparency, accountability and integrity in its decision-making and enhancing relationships with all its stakeholders.

To help fulfill this commitment, information used to support environmental decision making processes is made publicly available. This material is listed in Attachment (A1).

While such documents are generally considered to be public documents, there may be issues of confidentiality, privacy, and commercial or legal sensitivity which may restrict the availability of some material.

Public access to records and documents is provided electronically through the DPI Mineral Resources website, and/or by hard copy, depending on the size of the document. The method of providing access to particular documents will be regularly reviewed to ensure the timely and effective provision of such information.

Through providing public access to information, the Department encourages greater public awareness and understanding of the management of exploration and mining activities in NSW.
