

NSW Native Game Bird Management Program

Using the digital hunter diary on your smart device

Thank you for taking part in the Native Game Bird Management Program (NGBMP). Your volunteer assistance and safe, ethical practices allow this important program to continue supporting NSW landholders.

Accurate and timely harvest reports are essential to the integrity and value of the NGBMP to the NSW community.

- Before your hunt – record in the Hunter Diary the landholder’s total licence allocation of game bird species no sooner than 48 hours before your hunt.
- After your hunt – record in the Hunter Diary your harvests of native game birds before leaving a property.
- Finalising your hunt – report the total number and type of native game birds you harvested under each landholder’s licence. This is so we can track harvests against the approved state quotas each year, to ensure native game bird hunting is managed in a sustainable way.

This digital Native Game Bird Hunter Diary allows you to comply with NGBMP rules for recording property game duck allocations before you hunt and recording your game duck harvests after you hunt, online or using a smartphone. We have provided a digital Hunter Diary for your convenience, however you can still use a hardcopy Hunter Diary.

How to use the Hunter Diary on your smart device

1. Download the free Adobe Acrobat Reader app from the AppStore (Apple) or Google Play (Android).
2. Download the Hunter Diary Editable PDF from Information for Native Game Bird Hunters page on our website -
3. Open the Hunter Diary using the Adobe Acrobat Reader app and populate the information before and after your hunt.
4. When you are ready to submit your harvest return, login to online licence holder services and enter the numbers you have recorded in your diary.
